SANTA FE MAN HERE TO REST SANTA CLARA BOY WINS EARLY FAME DETROITER SAYS ROADS ARE GOOD

Unexcelled Christmas weather which is being passed on in Hawaii this year has won the heart of A. G. Wells, general manager of the coast lines of the Santa Fe Railway, who arrived here on the Moana with Mrs. Wells and Miss Wells for a holiday time vacation.

"I came here to rest—that is all," said Wells this morning, "and that's exactly what I am going to do. No business for me now. There isn't a better place in the world to do it, either, than right here, and I'm enjoying every minute."

Wells went to the Pali yesterday and was surprised to find that he had been favored with one of the few days of the year when the customary gale was not blowing.

The Santa Fe man is intensely interested in the Adamson bill, commonly known as the eight-hour law, which was recently passed by Congress, and he is awaiting the finding of the courts on its constitutionality.

WOOL PRICES PREVAIL FOR SOUTHERN COTTON, SAYS ALABAMA VISITOR

There might have been a time when the South was interested in the "buy a sack of cotton" movement but it is not now, according to one of Honolulu's prominent visitors who is visiting here. Leonel Weil, a cotton broker of Montgomery, Alabama, who is at the Moana hotel with Mrs. Weil, is the man and he has some wonderful tales to tell about prosperity in the southern states.

Cotton is now selling down South at about 17 cents a pound, which used to be considered a good price for wool up north, he says, and at one time since the war it went up to 21 cents a pound, a most remarkable price, according to the southerner.

Mr. and Mrs. Weil came in the Great Northern and will be here some time. Weil represents the firm of Weil Bros., one of the largest dealers in cotton in the country.

CLEAN ADVERTISING DEMANDED, HE SAYS

"Tendencies in Advertising" is the title of a well-written and interesting booklet from the pen of John K. Allen, advertising manager of the Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass., copies of which have been received by members of the Honolulu Ad Club. A point which the author seeks to drive home is that a cleaner press is being demanded by the people and that clean journalism implies clean advertising as well as clean news.

Mr. Allen defines clean advertising as "no more nor less than clean personal conduct," and adds that "what a normal, well-balanced man would not think it right to do personally in a face-to-face transaction should not be done through the medium of an advertisement." He speaks of the one of the Santa Clara boys who came here with the party from that college a few months since has achieved fame at the age of 16 years and a result of his Hawaii visit. He received the inspiration of a song through his visit here and that song is now being played and sung all along the Pacific Coast and its popularity extending eastward. The San Jose (Cal.) Mercury-Herald thus tells the story:

"Joseph M. McKernan, Jr., a student at the University of Santa Clara, went to Honolulu last summer with the college orchestra which accompanied the baseball team. When he returned he wrote a poem and entitled it 'Goodby, Good Luck, Old Hawaii.' Then he composed some music to fit the words. When he had it arranged just the way he wanted it, he asked his friend Jimmie Bonetti, also a Santa Clara boy, to interpret it on the piano, and another friend, Minor Reed, to do so vocally. It seemed to go pretty good, so between them, with Ed Redmond's permission, they presented it at the Victory theater about a month ago. When an enthusiastic audience called, 'Author,' after the first rendition, little Joe, who had draped himself over the railing at the back of the theater, slipped out of the house and did a marathon down First street.

"An unusually large sale went like the introduction of the song here. San Francisco, always eager for the latest, has taken the ballad to its heart and everywhere orchestras are playing and people are singing, whistling and humming 'Goodby, Good Luck, Old Hawaii.' Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Los Angeles and other coast cities have taken their places in line with San Francisco, and when Chicago's first consignment of 500 copies went like the hot-cake industry, the manager of a chain of 300 stores scattered all over America wanted to know what it was all about, anyway 'all this fuss over another of those Hawaii songs'—and when he found out he ordered copies sent to every store in the chain.

"The consignment is now under way and thus at the tender age of 16 years, little Joe McKernan, who is as modest as he is brilliant, is enjoying a success such as many men fail to achieve in a lifetime of endeavor."

TEACH POLES AGRICULTURE

[By Associated Press]
WARSAW, Poland.—To encourage agriculture and to teach the roles, especially those of the peasant class, to farm along modern and up-to-date lines, arrangements have been made to open five agricultural schools in various parts of the kingdom.

study of advertising now going on in colleges and Y. M. C. A.'s, saying that it is now possible for the young man who desires to follow the business of newspaper publishing to attend courses in journalism and advertising in the same institution.

Straight from Detroit, where more automobiles are made than any other place in the world, comes a visitor to Honolulu to tell residents here that Hawaii has no particular reason to discredit her highways. The statement is made by Dr. W. E. Rice, a wealthy resident of the auto city and a stockholder in two big car companies. Mrs. Rice accompanies him.

"You would be surprised to know," says the visitor, "that the roads leading out of Detroit are nothing to be proud of, especially when they are feeders to a city which in the last 15 years has become the largest exporter of motor-propelled vehicles in the country."

The doctor says, however, that the good roads of the city which usually stop at the city boundaries to change into country lanes are rapidly being repaired and improved.

"We want people to come to Detroit and drive away in a car they have bought without finding disagreeable road conditions in Michigan," is his hope for the future.

Rice is interested in the Federal truck company and also in the Paige auto company.

TURKS ASSURE POPE OF CARE OF ALLIES' DEAD

PARIS, France—Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, today received a letter from the Vatican informing him that in response to a request by Pope Benedict the graves of French and English soldiers, who fell on Gallipoli peninsula should be cared for properly, the Turkish Minister of War has had photographs taken of all burial places of such soldiers and has sent them to the Pope. The photographs, the letter adds, will be placed on view at the Vatican for inspection by relatives and friends of those who fell in the Dardanelles campaign.
